RE: Extension of Expired Higher Education Tax Incentives

Dear Chairman Wyden, Chairman Camp, Ranking Member Hatch and Ranking Member Levin:

On behalf of the higher education associations listed below, I write to urge you to include extensions of the above-the-line deduction for qualified tuition and related expenses (tuition deduction) and the Individual Retirement Account (IRA) Charitable Rollover in any tax extenders legislation that is enacted this year. Unfortunately, both of these important provisions expired at the end of 2013.

The tuition deduction helps reduce the cost of college by allowing students or their parents to deduct up to $4,000 in eligible higher education expenses from their taxable income. The tuition deduction is particularly important to graduate students, who are ineligible for the American Opportunity Tax Credit. Regrettably, its expiration last year means many students and families lost a valuable benefit that helps them finance a college education.

The IRA Charitable Rollover permits IRA owners who are at least 70½ years old to make tax-free donations to eligible charities, including colleges and universities. Since it was first instituted in 2006, the IRA Charitable Rollover has proven to be a valuable charitable giving incentive that should be extended to help all non-profit organizations generate new or increased contributions. Its lapse impairs the ability of colleges and universities to raise charitable funds at a time when private support is increasingly important to institutions struggling to maintain benefits for students, particularly financial aid, during challenging economic times and significant declines in state appropriations.
We strongly support these provisions and urge Congress to act swiftly to retroactively extend them this year.

Sincerely,

Molly Corbett Broad
President
